

Manipulating Sleep to Boost Performance

Shift work can change all the time as an engineer, which may mean an increase in night work. Night work can degrade performance, however with manipulating sleep habits and a change in approach to work can help.

Read here

Airbus Helicopters has released an Emergency Alert Service Bulletin after pilots reported that they felt ‘significant vibrations’ prior to the Omni H160 ditching.

Read here

Pilots Felt ‘Significant Vibrations’

It comes after reviews found that most of the UK airspace was mapped in the 1950s and requires modernisation.

Read here

UK Seeks to Streamline Airspace Redesign

After the February 2025 Learjet crash, the NTSB has released a report stating that operators are to ensure Learjet main landing gear are securely attached.

Read here

NTSB Releases Report After Recent Learjet Crash

Fatigue: CHIRP

The Confidential Human Factors Incident Reporting Programme (CHIRP) produces a report on the understanding of fatigue.

Read here

Gama Aviation has received UK CAA approval to extend its Part-145 maintenance scope to include Learjet 45 and Learjet 60 aircraft to strengthen its UK-based MRO capability.

Read here

Gama Aviation Secures Approval For Learjet Maintenance

Challenger 600 Wing Design in Scrutiny After Crash

The Bombardier Challenger 600 wing design, highly sensitive to surface contamination, is facing scrutiny by the FAA after a crash during icing conditions.

Read here

The Air Accidents Investigation Branch have released their monthly bulletin for December 2025, highlighting the final reports that were made that month.

Read here

AAIB Monthly Bulletin